True Color: Orange

My color was orange. The color orange represents action and esteem. My values are expediency, variety, skills, being in the here and now, as well as performance. My abilities represent my personality. They describe an orange as a negotiator with virtuosity in skills, an entertainer with quick reactions to situations, and an entrepreneur. I feel that many of these descriptions are an accurate representation of how I interact with people. However, many of the impulsivity traits in the bullseye I would have to disagree with. I think I am a mix of a gold and an orange.

This information helps with my future business plans because it tells me my strengths and also my weaknesses. It shows how I can succeed in the workplace. These traits will also assist in my relationship building skills. Getting a job is easier when you have perfected these traits, and can use them to your advantage.
